NAVY AIR AND MISSILE DEFENSE COMMAND RECOGNIZES EMPLOYEE OF THE QUARTER

(DAHLGREN, VA) – Navy Air and Missile Defense Command recognized one of its top performers during a recent ceremony here. Eddie J. Williams Jr., an administrative officer with the command, was recognized for outstanding performance and was honored as, “NAMDC Employee of the Quarter.”

“Eddie is both a team player and a strong leader,” said Rear Admiral M. Stewart O’Bryan, NAMDC commander. “He is respected by his peers and valued by the leadership.”

Williams joined the Navy in 1989. He served aboard USS DAVID R. RAY (DD 971) and USS COWPENS (CG 63), both in the Pacific theater. Ashore, he served as Security Manager, Fleet Air, Keflavik, Iceland; N8 staff, Chief of Naval Operations; and Administrative Chief, National Military Command Center. Williams retired from the Navy as a Chief Petty Officer in 2010. Later that year, he joined Navy Air and Missile Defense Command. The command’s mission is to serve as Navy’s lead organization for Naval, Joint and Combined Integrated Air Missile initiatives.

Williams resides in Stafford, Va., with his wife and two daughters.
